A Handsome Sign.

Joseph Stoeckle, the brewer, has received from New York city, where it was cast in bronze, a metallic image, representing Gambrinus, which will be used as a sign at his new brewery, Fifth and Adams streets. The features, eyes, hair, hands and arms of the image, which is 10 feet 2 inches in height, and weighs more than 1,000 pounds, look very natural. The head is surmounted by a golden coronet, the left hand rests upon a beer keg, which is wreathed with a hop vine, and the right hand is extended, the hand holding up a glass of foaming lager. The wearing apparel consists of brown pantaloons, blue coat with golden braid and scarlet cloak lined with fur. A sword hangs at the side and a chain and locket is clasped around the neck.
